G G D A7 A
 Sword and pistol by his side, a -huh, a - huh, fare thee well.

Well he rode down to Miss Mouse's door Where he had often been before	A fried misquito and a roasted flea
He took Miss Mousie on his knee Said "Miss Mousie will you marry me"	First to come in were to little ants Fixing around to have a dance
I'll have to ask my Uncle Rat See what he will say to that	Next to come in was a bumble bee Bouncing a fiddle on his knee
Well, Uncle Rat laughed and shook his fat sides To think his niece would be a bride	Next to come in was a fat sassy lad Thinks himself as big as his dad
Well, Uncle Rat rode off to town To buy his niece a wedding gown	Thinks himself a man indeed Because he chews the tobacco weed
Where will the wedding supper be Way down yonder in a hollow tree What will the wedding supper be	And next to come in was a big tomcat He swallowed the frog and the mouse and the rat
